Klan and Civil Authorities In Oklahoma Yield Before Troops and Machine-Guns

Meeting of Legislature for Impeachment Called On for Present.

COURT ORDER REVOKED

Grand Jury Will Not Intervene Charges Against Governor of Missouri of Funds (Hills) Not Permitted on Streets After Midnight.

By United Press

OKLAHOMA CITY, Sept. 17.—Military rule dictated by Gov. Walton in his fight to disband the Ku Klux Klan was supreme through out the state of Oklahoma today.

The second day of martial law found military guardsmen on patrol in the city and in the state capital building with bayonets and machine guns the armed rule by military law.

Grand jurors and state legislators who had gathered at Oklahoma City today to take action against Gov. Walton for his stand against the Klan yielded unwillingly to the display of military force and did not meet.

As to the Klan the target of the governor's campaign to rid the state of lawlessness, it submitted itself without protest. A few crosses were burned in downtown streets but that was all. A grand jury had been called to investigate allegations of misuse of funds by Governor Walton.

Arrests from W. S. Weyland in command in Oklahoma county where absolute military rule is in effect for the grand jury to meet and George W. Clark, judge of the district court, said the jurors would comply. At the same time he said that the governor's military rule was not a violation of the constitution.

JAPAN APPEARS WILLING

Purpose of Second Conference in Supplement of That Held in Washington
Two Years Ago and to Settle Air
Cruiser and Submarine Questions.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—Pacifists have been put out by the United States to offer for the first time in two years a second disarmament conference. Two of the three have been away from the proposed site. The third is willing to attend another conference.

Great Britain, France and Japan have been approached on the subject. The British have been unresponsive and no direct diplomatic inquiry from this government to the others.

The purpose of a second conference is to supplement a complete work of the first parties held in Washington two years ago. Further consideration of Pacific questions and another effort to get some where on submarine and aircraft limitation was included in the unofficial discussions.

Great Britain's attitude as reflected in a reply is hesitant. The British seemed to have the idea that such a conference might embarrass British plans for carrying out of the world's greatest navy of Japan at Singapore. A project of an armament of which France also showed little enthusiasm for a second conference. Her attitude being that some effort might be made to reach a compromise to obtain peace by which to recover her in the reparations question.

To Renew All Chipped and Discolored Walls

Walls that are finished with any one of the various water finishes—that is, water in which is mixed something like a colored whitewash leaving the walls tinted or colored—often show wear or rubbing or even appear chipping off of the color where chairs or furniture have scraped against them. Without doing the whole wall over, it can be refurnished to a great extent merely by using a fine brush wet with water. A very fine blue, brown, or a common paint brush thoroughly clean is all right to use. Wet this and shake most of the water off. Then go over the chipped and discolored places. The color from the near surfaces of the wall will again cover these whitened spots and do much toward giving the walls an appearance of having been redecorated. One household goes over her walls each year in this way, and redecoration is seldom needed.

Required Too Much Effort.
Mrs. Evelyn—And have you been in South America?
Mrs. Newrich—Many times. In fact I know it from end to end.
Mrs. Evelyn—Then of course you went up the Amazon?
Mrs. Newrich—No, as a matter of fact, I didn't. My husband went to the top, but I never cared much for climbing.

For Sports Wear.
Some fascinating blouses are shown for wear with sports costumes, as much care being spent on their design as on that of whole evening frocks. One such bit of perfection is of white georgette, made with long sleeves. In front and back are panels of printed white satin, the design being Persian, and in the soft Persian colorings.

Card of Thanks.
We wish to thank our friends and neighbors for the kindness and sympathy extended during our recent bereavement, the death of our mother, Mrs. Sarah Buttermore. Especially do we thank those who sent floral tributes, donated cars, Rev. Lamberton and the choir.—Advertisement.—17-18

WHITE LILY Your Protection Mark on Choice Hams and Bacon, and other Meat Products

The Family Favorite—White Lily Ham
It pays to buy a standard, reputable brand of ham because you are sure then of its quality—such a ham as White Lily. White Lily Ham and Bacon are as perfect and uniform in quality as a sister can make them—you can rely on the next morning just as good as the last—and this means GOOD HAM ALL THE TIME. The reason is in our careful selection of porkers—in their care and feeding, and special treatment that makes it unnecessary to parboil White Lily Ham for frying. Tenderness and flavor are the satisfying qualities of a good ham—and White Lily Ham are always tender and flavorful. Sometimes cost a cent or two more per pound but are worth a double in the satisfaction they afford. U. S. Government Inspected, too—this is important. Your dealer can supply you regularly. And live them whole—a White Lily Ham will supply good meat for the family for a week.

J. J. EVANS IN RACE FOR BURGESS OF S. CONNELLSVILLE

J. J. Evans, one of the best known and well known citizens of the borough of South Conneltsville, has entered into the race for the office of Burgess of the borough of South Conneltsville, being subject to the decision of the Republican primary September 18.

Mr. Evans at the present time conducts a grocery and confectionery store in South Pittsburg street, and is also a heavy property holder of the borough. He came to the borough in December 1886 securing a position as a roller with the Humbert plant of which he was one of the stockholders. Mr. Evans was in the employ of the American Sheet and Tin Plate Company for 25 years and six days, resigning on April 14, 1918, after which he opened a grocery store and at the present time is carrying on a growing trade.

Mr. Evans was a former member of the borough council but for various reasons he resigned before his term was up. Mr. Evans is a frank speaker, and does not believe in "beating around the bush" or holding a board over his mouth when he is asked to express his opinion on certain subjects.

Not only is Mr. Evans running for Burgess but for council as well. In the management of his own affairs he has proved to be a successful business man. He has ability was never known to fail in any undertaking, understands human nature. The things also to merit your whole hearted support at the Primary on Tuesday.

Dignified Dress for Cool Days of Autumn

This very neat and sensible dress for fall wear is of stitched broadcloth in brown, one of the favorite shades for the season.

Graceful Cape Still Holds Its Popularity

Grace is the paramount characteristic of the cape mode, and that is, undoubtedly, a reason for the continuance of its popularity, observes a fashion writer in the Boston Herald. The cape, more than any other garment, contributes its unqualified bit to an appearance of height, which nearly every woman considers a vital necessity—and that is another reason for its extended vogue. Graceful slender lines—what more could any woman ask?

Dress capes of soft wool fabrics, silks and crepes sport capes of tweed, polo cloth and novelty wools. All-over embroidered capes flounced or tiered capes tucked and pulled capes fashion sponsors them all. And fashion even goes a little bit farther, using their winging grace on suits and frocks, and generally making so much of them that the result is a cape mode of great prominence.

A good model is the general utility cape, that may be termed tailored, sports or just practical. It is the cape mode at its best, since it is usable, without losing a bit of its grace and beauty. There are many capes of this type worn and they are found quite indispensable, since there are few daytime occasions that they would not fitly adorn.

The deep piled fabrics lend them selves most attractively to capes, and are usually cut on straight lines and show stitching ornamentally at hem or circular bottom effects. And more often than not they are colored with the capes being favorite. They are beautifully tailored and lined and meet every need of the warmth giving summer wrap. Jackets may favor the upper section when the circular flounce is adopted.

Among the newest cape fashions one sees the tiered cape the flared cape, the draped cape, the cape giving an unusually graceful line. Silk capes are beautiful in garment and the individual value of their modeling and make an adaptable wrap for wear over the afternoon or evening gown.

New Fall Hats Have Scarfs, Bags to Match

The fall line of hats is divided among suedes, taffetas and felt. Combinations of suede and taffeta are shown and quite a large number of these models are made up in felt. Two shapes predominate in the suede and taffeta and combination models. The brimmed hats, mostly all short, an upward roll from the face and there are chic little turbans with a wing of taffeta or suede darting from one side with a downward brim.

Many of the all taffeta hats have the roll brim closely shirred the shirring put in with a pleat stitch. In most cases the under side of the brim is of a different shape from the top and the crown. Some of the loveliest of these hats have the upper side closely covered with var-colored embroidery.

The felt hats are all of the cloche shape and extremely small and close-fitting. Many of these are trimmed with felt forming narrow bands and cords.

With the hats are a number of matching scarfs and bags of suede and taffeta.

To Make a Flaring Cuff

To make the new flaring cuff—a tight fitting plain foundation sleeve at each forearm row of one and one-half inch fabric or more ribbon, about one inch apart, sewing the ribbon on one edge to the sleeve, gathering very slightly and bringing the upper row of ribbon just below the elbow to give the fashionable flare.

Plainer Wraps

Smart coats of suit crepe and moire, cut on plain but distinct lines, are a pleasant relief from the highly embroidered and excessively trimmed coats to which we have become accustomed this year.

Save His Money.

An Irishman boarded a car the other day, but after a word with the conductor made for the door again.

An inspector who happened to be on the car said to him: "Surely you don't want to get off again so soon and besides, you haven't paid your fare."

"Oh, I want to go to Southern street," said the Irishman, "as the conductor says there ain't no such place."

"Well, there isn't," answered the inspector.

"Then faith an' what's the good of going there, then?"

Schwab Lent Mrs. Hayes $20,000, Lawyer Admits In Bankruptcy Hearing

NEW YORK—William A. Mitchell, attorney for Charles M. Schwab, steel financier, admitted at the hearing in bankruptcy of William M. Tobey, builder interested with Mrs. Myrtle B. Hayes in construction of two Boston hotels, that Mr. Schwab had indirectly loaned Mrs. Hayes $20,000 in 1922.

Mitchell said Mrs. Hayes' claim that she had a letter from Schwab assuming obligations of $750,000 on the Bostonian hotel was supposed to have been "confidential," and he did not suspect forgery of Schwab's name.

Schwab repudiated the signature on the letter. Mrs. Hayes is under indictment for second degree forgery. Schwab admitted having known Mrs. Hayes for 25 years.

$100,000 STATUE BRINGS $50

Italian Farmer Who Found Marble
Torso of a Venus First Sold
It for $5.

The history of some pieces of marble which were found buried in a field at Sintessa, near Naples, in ancient days the site of a Greek colony, has formed the subject of a long-drawn-out law case in which the government has at length secured an important verdict.

The fragments were apparently of no particular value and the farmer sold them for $5. They were on their way to the new purchaser when the government director of antiquities, Professor Spinazzola, ordered him to return them to Naples for examination. The professor, having looked at them, exercised his powers of compulsory purchase and bought the fragments for $50.

Under his direction they were cleaned and put together, when they appeared as the torso of a beautiful Venus, undoubtedly by the hand of Praxiteles (the greatest of the Attic sculptors of the fourth century B. C.) and worth about $100,000.

The farmer sued the government for half the value of the find, and after gaining a verdict in two courts lost his case when the government took it to the court of appeals. The statue is now one of the most precious possessions of the Naples National museum.

Odd Way of Drawing Water.

I took notes while we were at Epa,
New Guinea, of a rather curious method of drawing water from the communal spring, half a mile from the village, writes Reginald Pound in the Wild World Magazine. Twice a day the women went down in chattering groups to the spring, carrying bamboo pipes 12 feet long. These pipes were made by forcing out the pith at the joints, and held about five gallons of water up to the top. When full, the drinking end was plugged with leaves, the pipe being stood in a dry spot near the owner's house and used when needed.
Incidentally drinking from these water receptacles was rather hazardous business, care being necessary lest a too copious supply should gush out when the pipe was held to the mouth.

Blueberries an Inch Thick.
A blueberry an inch in diameter is not a dream but a possibility. At the government testing plantation at Whitehall, N. J., about 25,000 hybrids have been fruited. Berries three-fourths of an inch in diameter have been produced on many of these, and one of them this year reached almost seven-eighths of an inch. The Department of Agriculture will continue the experiments until berries an inch in diameter are obtained.

Needed Awakening.

A Yankee tourist was being shown over an old church wherein hundreds of people were buried.

"A great many people sleep between these walls," said the guide, indicating the inscription covered floor with a sweep of his hand.

"So," said the American, "Suppose you ever in our country. Why don't you get a more interesting teacher?"

Impending Catastrophe.

It was in the midst of a nose dive, and Reginald, who was making his first flight, tugged frantically at the stick's lever.

"We better get away from here," he shrieked; "the earth's swelling up like a balloon and it's liable to burst any minute!"

BIRD ENTOMBED BY MARTINS

Sparrow That Had Grabbed Martin's Nest Is Made the Victim of Dire Revenge.

An English ornithologist, H. Garrett, makes a specialty of observing the manners and methods followed by birds. He recently recalled the story of a sparrow which, finding a newly built martin's nest, took "possession" in the absence of the owner. The martin, seeing the usurper, called for help, and soon a thousand martins came, at "full speed," to attack the sparrow, but the latter was invincible. After a quarter of an hour's conflict all the martins disappeared.
The sparrow thought he had got the better, and the spectators judged that the martins had abandoned their understanding.

Not in the least! They immediately returned to the charge, and, each of them having procured a little of the temperament with which they make their nests, they all at once fell upon the sparrow and inclosed him in the nest to perish there, although they could not drive him out.

The Split Infinitive.

One thinks of that solemn warning against the enormity of the split infinitive which has done so much to aggravate the Puritanism of the bad writers who scrupulously avoid it. This superstition seems to have had its origin in a false analogy with Latin in which the infinitive is never split, for the good reason that it is impossible to split.
In the greater freedom of English it is possible and has been done for at least the last five hundred years by the greatest masters of English; only the good writer never uses this form helplessly and involuntarily but with a delicate object, and that is the only rule to observe. An absolute prohibition in this matter is the mark of those who are too ignorant, or else too unintelligent, to recognize a usage which is at the essence of English speech.—
Havelock Ellis, in the London Mercury.

Hen Has Record for Big Eggs.

Ashland, Ore.—Mrs. J. D. Ramsey of Ashland lays claim to having a world's champion hen when it comes to laying large eggs. All eggs laid by this hen are unusually large, but one egg which measured 8 1/2 by 7 1/2 inches, is believed to be one of the largest ever laid in Oregon. The hen is a Barred Rock, from the famous Oregon Agricultural college strain, and is three years old.

MOTHERS AND THEIR CHILDREN

Encouraging Girl Friends.

One Mother Says: My children are all boys and lack the wholesome balance of sisters. It is my problem to bring girl friends into the house in a happy, comradely way. I therefore began, when they were very young, encouraging girls to play in the yard. When they grew older I found girls must be specially invited and a time arranged when I should be home to entertain them. I have succeeded in making friends with a group of girls who seem almost like daughters to me, and my boys are never self-conscious around girls.

MRS. A. M. MONTGOMERY. Funeral services for Mrs. Rose Montgomery, wife of A. M. Montgomery, were held Sunday afternoon. A brief service was held at 1:30 o'clock in the late residence in Fayette street when Rev. L. H. Stevens, pastor of the Flatwoods Baptist Church, read from the Scriptures. A mixed quartet composed of C. L. Bailey, Mrs. N. T. Hibben, Mrs. S. B. Dull and Herbert Ellis, accompanied by Miss Lulu Bailey at the piano sang "Lead Kindly Light," and "Asleep in Jesus." The cortege then proceeded to the Flatwoods Church which was filled to capacity with friends and relatives. At the service there both Rev. Stevens and Blake officiated. The quartet sang "Abide With Me" and "God Shall Wipe Away All Tears."

The pallbearers were Edward Elliott and N. M. Robinson of McKeesport, William Jones of Latrobe, William Dunlap of Greensburg and William McBurney and Essey Lynn of Flatwoods. Burial was made in Flatwoods Cemetery.

Among out-of-town relatives present were Mr. and Mrs. William Castor, Mr. and Mrs. William Swartz and family, Mr. and Mrs. William Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Edward and Richard Dunlap, and Mr. and Mrs. William Dunlap, all of Latrobe; Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Dunlap and Mr. and Mrs. William Dunlap of Greensburg; Mr. and Mrs. John Banks and Mr. and Mrs. Chad Osborn, Donora; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Robinson, Mr. and Mrs. Lora Guller and Mrs. Louise Leathers of Monaca; Samuel McConnell and Miss Ella Plunkett of West Newton, Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Robinson, Mr. and Mrs. Porter Dunlap, William Robinson, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Elliott and family, Miss Viola Hoffman, T. Singing is Half the Joy of Owning a Gulbransen

The songs you like best to hear sung by some loved voice, to your own softly accented, perfectly timed accompaniment on a Gulbransen. There's genuine enjoyment for you.

Select your song rolls from the hundreds upon hundreds available, with the words already printed on them. The key they are placed in doesn't matter. Too high? Too low? Just turn a knob. The Gulbransen instantly transposes.

An ordinary song roll may be played as a piano and a Gulbransen, however, can be played as a piano, a medium or a forte. The Gulbransen is taken care of by the roll. Through the Gulbransen, your voice, your time, your expression, following each roll, interpretation given the song by the vocalist.

PORT OF LOST PLANES HOLDS MANY SECRETS

Sky-Like Sea Now and Then Betrays Men Who Put Their Faith in It.

New York.—For centuries the sea has given us thrilling tales of adventure, yielding romance and treasure, the while it has taken its annual toll in men and ships. Throughout the long years, though science has done much to lessen the dangers of ocean travel, we still have of amazing ships.

Today there is another element being conquered—the air. Like the sea, the air has now and again betrayed the men who put their faith in it. Some have had only adventure, others sheer tragedy, and others have left us only mysteries.

Men have been known to go up into the clouds without being heard from again. One hears the stories where ever flying men gather.

When Col. Francis Marshall and Lieut. Charles Weber of the army air service disappeared last December while flying between San Diego, Calif., and an army post in Arizona, their bodies were found. It was reported that their plane had been spotted off the coast and evidently had crashed for Mexico; and the suggestion is that falling again to regain their course they were forced to land in unfriendly country. The Mexican government conducted an investigation and found no trace of them or their plane among the semi-outlawed hands near the border. This is one of the rare instances where experienced pilots have lost their way over a familiar course. Possibly fog or a severe storm negated the value of their compass.

Lost in Arctic.
For a number of aerial voyagers, however, their supreme adventure is not the beginning and the end. Of such is the disappearance of Capt. Mansel H. Jones, British ace, who on May 23, 1919, left New Mass., carrying a flight from Boston and Atlantic City. No trace of him has been discovered, though the air forces of three continents, British, Canadian and American, sought for many months.

Under the flight of Jones, who was flying over land and with distinct landmarks to guide him throughout the coast, was the polar expedition of Prof. S. A. Andrée, the Swedish scientist and his companions, Knut Franke, and Nils Strindberg, the last a cousin of the dramatist. There was the first aerial disappearance of record, and one of the most striking.

The crew of a two-engine plane on a July 21st mission in 1917 with the object of flying across the North Pole from Copenhagen. Their craft was the largest of its kind. It measured 100 feet from the top of the gas bag to the base of the wing, and was of a type usually equipped for the voyage—four 30-hp. engines, 100-gal. fuel tanks, 100-gal. oil tanks, 100-gal. water tanks, 100-gal. food tanks, 100-gal. medicine tanks, 100-gal. clothing tanks, 100-gal. other tanks. All well on its way, it was seen by the land before it disappeared.

On the morning of May 23, 1914, Haniel left Paris in a racing plane bound for England. He reached Le Crotoy on the coast 45 minutes later and thence he went to Hardebol and landed on the sands. Starting again after lunch, he passed over Boulogne and observers saw his machine pointed toward Cape Gris Nez. Then he vanished forever.

The war came soon afterward and, owing to the spy fever which afflicted all belligerent nations, stories floated about England which made of Haniel a paid agent of the Kaiser. It was revealed that Haniel was born "Somewhere in Germany." Months later a patrol boat picked up a piece of a wing strut which might have been on the plane. But it was not proved.

Later on a pair of goggles was found. With the growing popularity of the German aviator, Haniel, it was conjectured here and there that Haniel was really Haniel, who had changed his name along with his allegiance. The rumors were little credited in official circles. Members of Haniel's family were heartbroken and published letters broadcast to show that Haniel had been born in Hamburg and at the time of his birth the city was an independent town, that his father had been a native Englishman, and furthermore that the aviator's body had really been found on July 1, 1914, by the skipper of the fishing smack St. Helene, floating in the sea some ten miles off Point d'Alprech. The family insisted that an inflated bicycle tire found on the body had furnished conclusive proof, because Haniel, for whom Haniel was flying, had indicated on his wearing it. The body had been buried at sea. The courts accepted the evidence and granted the family letters of administration.

There is another story, not of common knowledge. Recently a former officer in the Royal Air Force gave what he insisted is the true version. It is set down here for what it is worth.

A Spy Story.
In 1917 appeared at the British training field at Crofton, now London's principal airport, a handsome young British officer wearing four war medals. He presented papers authorizing the commanding officer to accept him as a flying cadet, stating that he had been transferred from the land forces. Captain E. soon became one of the most prominent pilots in the service. The new pilot had one peculiar habit. Whenever he went up for flight he carried a small travelling bag, explaining that he had an instinctive dislike for sleeping without his own pillow; and that in the event of a forced landing compelling him to sleep in a distant hamlet over might be desired his own soap and toilet articles.

One day he appeared on the field prepared for a scheduled altitude flight. He wore his best uniform and carried the bag. He was last seen at an altitude of 10,000 feet flying toward the coast.

Months passed, and years. Hostilities ceased.

One day British representatives in Holland were informed that the remains of an English plane still lay where it had landed safely, and then had been destroyed by its own pilot, who had alighted close to the German border and had then escaped across the frontier. The aerial lumber on the wreckage was ample evidence that it was the plane in which the missing pilot had ascended. It then developed that coincident with his disappearance there were missing plans and descriptions of at least nine of the latest types of fighting planes then being developed in the United Kingdom.

Of late flying has become an commonplace as other modes of transport, that is, for the persons engaged in it. But it was only two years ago that Capt. Alexander Thompson, on route from St. Louis, Mo., to Florida, was in Mexico on his way to the coast. He was flying over a mountain range when his plane stalled. His plane lay at the bottom of a deep canyon into which he had glided when his motor stalled.

This experience was relatively proper, however, to that of Lieut. Ross M. Hardebol, one of the pilots with the Atlantic fleet, whose motor stalled 1000 feet over the sea off the coast of Cuba in May, 1920. Hardebol's plane turned upside down when he struck the water. He alighted on top of it and was struggling to hand himself up when he was interrupted by a school of man-eating tiger sharks. They charged him in droves, singly and in pairs. Hardebol spent all afternoon fighting them off. A submarine passed, but did not stop the tiger sharks, which were still attacking him. Hardebol was so exhausted with the possibility of being torn to pieces by the sharks, that he was forced to use wooden braces, struts and wing ribs as weapons.

One afternoon he broke the light blue of wood across the noses of the sharks. He stood on his overturned plane throughout the night. Morning brought the sun and a terrible throb that such an only unprovoked sailors with salt spray seeking the life can know. After hours of labor the aviator fashioned a makeshift evaporator from tubes and piping secured from the machine. With this he got about a quart of brackish water. Late that second afternoon another plane passed overhead and this time circled and dropped down alongside the wreck. Hardebol collapsed as he was lifted aboard. He spent two weeks in the hospital. At that his luck was better than that of the three British aviators which disappeared off the Irish coast in February of that year. They were not found.

Details of hardship and adventure survive only with the victors in the struggle with the elements. Near Taberna, in that part of the Dark Continent formerly paying tribute to the Kaiser under the name of German East Africa, are scattered pairs of the largest of the British airplanes which in February, 1920, set out on the eventual flight from Cairo to Cape Town. All of the planes came to grief in one way or another.

HE FOUGHT CUSTER

Chief Left Hand, of the Arapahoe tribe of Wyoming, wearing the sergeant's uniform that is supplied regularly by Uncle Sam for his heroic conduct in the Battle of Fort Custer. He carried the flag of peace and is known as the Friendly Chief of the Arapahoe Indians, for whom he is now fighting in the reservation tangle. He is one of the two remaining Indians who fought against Custer, and the reason they would not tell about the fight is that they feared reprisals by Custer's friends in the army. He is past seventy years of age, but still lively. He was made a sergeant after serving as a scout for General Crook.

One-Legged Men Have the Greatest Vitality

Philadelphia.—One-legged ex-servicemen who took part in a recent walking match demonstrated that the possession of an artificial limb is not the handicap that most people imagine it to be.

According to some medical authorities, the amputation of a leg tends to increase rather than decrease vitality. It is often noticed that a person who loses a limb gains considerably in general health.

This is borne out by the experience of a number of one-legged celebrities. Samuel Foster, the great actor, who lost a leg as a result of a fall from a horse, declared that he never felt so well with two legs as he did with one.

Another famous one-legged man was Josiah Wedgwood, the great potter, who was so fond of his leg that he employed a man, and employed to do nothing but make and polish wooden legs for his use.

In the long roll of lord mayors of London there is at least one who had a wooden leg. He was Sir Brook Watson, who, although he lost his leg at an early age, refused to forego the privilege, career on which he had set his heart. He was known as "The Wooden-legged Commissioner," and rose to the rank of general.

Plan to Erect Shaft for Jean-Henri Fabre

Paris.—A committee headed by General de Castelnau, and including leading educators and officials of the department of Aveyron, is arranging for the erection of a statue to Jean-Henri Fabre, who wrote books about insects that were more interesting than romances.

The monument, now being executed by the sculptor Malet, will be placed within a year on the central square of Saint-Leons, the village where Fabre spent his childhood.

The committee considered this peaceful spot the most appropriate for a statue of the "noblest and purest son of Aveyron."

AMAZED AT YANKEE TEETH

The French looker-on is sometimes an old soldier, but often is some black-clad woman who took up her husband's duties when he was called to the front, and who (for he never came back) will continue them until her little Francois is grown up—or, as she sometimes sadly puts it, "Until he comes back safe, as I hope, from the next war, 'm'sieu."

For five more days we paddled along the 100-kilometer stretch of stream that unfurls itself ribbonlike among rolling, windmill-topped slopes between Redon and Nantes, writes Melville Chase in the National Geographic Magazine.

We found that the countryside still fondly recalled the passage of American troops in 1918—how they had swum in the canal and had given the children little packets of chewing gum, and had strangely delighted in consuming cow fodder.

This last detail was related to me by a farmer, who added: "Most vigorous young men choose to do. Wonderful teeth, wonderful stomachs. How they could even digest that stuff was the wonder of the countryside." And he pointed to one of those fine fields of Indian corn which in France are cultivated exclusively as cattle food.

"Why, that's easy," we replied; "all Americans eat that." And we described the manner of preparing and dispatching an ear of corn. Suddenly a light broke on the listener's face: "Ah," he exclaimed, "I understand. Then one doesn't eat it, eh and all, like the cow, one just picks at it as if it were an artichoke, 'm'sieu-pas?"

The Difficulty.
"They say music makes the cow give more milk."
"Still I imagine it is going to be difficult to persuade some of our temperamental artists to accompany a cow."

Cat in California Fights Own Image

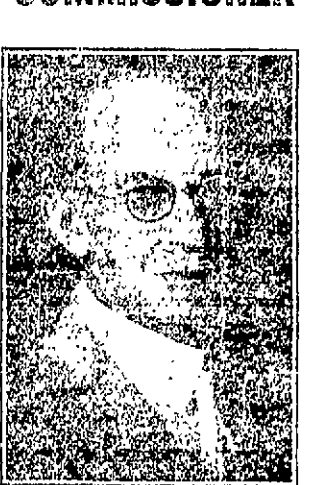

(Huntington Park, Calif., has a cat that fights its own reflection. The cat lives in a grocery store. It hops up on the counter, looks into a mirror, and sees its own image. Then the fun begins. Puss dashes against the mirror, splits and claws, but the other "puss" does the same. After doing itself out the animal will seek a corner and forget the one-cat battle for a while.

The What and Why of an Earthquake

Exactly what is an earthquake and what causes it?

These two questions very naturally pop into the mind of millions of persons when a catastrophe such as that which recently occurred in Japan overtakes some great city and causes thousands of deaths.

A bulletin from Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic Society, answers these questions:

"Superficially the name itself tells the story. It is no more or less than a quaking of the earth or a part of it, and theoretically any vibration at all fills the bill. From the tremor caused by a heavy truck passing along the street or a blast in a nearby quarry to the most violent convulsion that slides hills from their bases and opens yawning chasms in the earth.

Earth Waves Hold Secret.

"But going beyond the superficial there is more that needs to be said even by way of a bare definition of an earthquake. The quake is so far as man experiences it is the coming to the surface of waves in the earth. These waves cannot be compared simply to the up-and-down waves of rippled water nor to the back-and-forth waves of the air that make sound. Even the simplest wave motion is none too easy to understand, and the waves in the varying earth materials that make themselves known to man as earthquakes are probably the most complex waves that exist. They are at once motions up-and-down like waves in a pond, and motions back-and-forth like waves in the air, and in a long coiled spring suspended with a weight bobbing at its end, and in addition may have twists about imaginary pivot lines in all of the three dimensions.

"The earth waves originate in some region down in the earth and start out in every direction. The waves from a pebble dropped into a pond form growing circles on the surface of the water. But the waves in the earth being in a solid attempt to form spheres that constantly grow outward. Soon, however, because of the difference in the rigidity of different rock materials the form is not a sphere at all but a very irregular curved solid instead more nearly that of a potato, perhaps.

Two Kinds of Waves.

"The two principal types of earth waves, those that travel like the pulsations in a bobbing spring, stretch out, and those that travel like ripples and the waves in a pond with a side-wise motion, move at a terrific speed. The pulsing waves are the swifter and of course the place where they make themselves felt first and most strongly is the surface area straight above their starting point. This is technically the epicenter or 'epicentrum' the pulsing waves around the epicenter travel by pushing up to the surface of the earth and everything on it, and it then fall back, and it is done very rapidly, and thus the actual city in which the earthquake is felt is not a sphere at all but a very irregular curved solid instead more nearly that of a potato, perhaps.

"The 'down' waves follow almost immediately after the first pulsing waves, and the two which move together, twisting and turning, operate together. The ground in the epicenter is thrust up and falls and in the same time is jerked sideways and back for tiny distances in every direction.

"At points some distance from the epicenter the pulsing waves strike the surface at an angle and cause the effects of the sideways waves and jerks are surface undulations. The shaking at the epicenter is so strong that the earth's surface there into undulatory waves like ripples on a pond, and these also travel outward in widening circles. These surface waves are those of greatest motion but least speed. They register the faintest vibrations on the seismographs of the world.

How the Waves Start.

"The second important question in regard to an earthquake is: What starts the waves?

"No one has ever seen an earthquake wave start outward from its center, and it is safe enough to say that no one ever will. But science has built certain hypotheses about the matter that seems to account satisfactorily for the happenings, and which are accepted pretty generally.

"Hold a dry stick as high as your thumb in your hands and bend it until it breaks. At the snap waves will travel to your hands and usually give you a quite painful sensation.

"Hold an iron bar by one end and strike the other sharply with a hammer. Again the vibrations carried to your hand may be violent enough to produce a painful pain.

"And if you should strike a small explosive cap with the end of a long rod grasped by the other hand the explosion would probably bring the same pain to your fingers.

"Breaks Probably Most Important.

"It is generally held that earthquakes start from a point where one of the three forces illustrated is suddenly released—a break, a blow or an explosion. Breaks are credited with the responsibility for most earthquakes. It is believed that because of slow contraction or shrinking which may result from the cooling of the outer portion of the earth or because of pressure from deposited silt, strains are set up below the surface like those in the bending stick. Eventually the strain reaches the breaking point and there is a snapping of the rocks which sends violent waves to the surface, causing earthquakes.

"The blow type of earthquake is probably less important. Such a blow might result from the falling in of a great cavern, but probably would cause only a local shiver. A more important cause of a blow might be a slipping of one mass of rock over another with a collision at the end of the slide. Such a blow often follows a break, the two acting together.

Volcanic Explosions Play Part.

"Earthquakes in active volcanic regions may often result from explosions of gases far beneath the surface, but it is quite possible that even in the neighborhood of volcanoes the majority of the quakes may arise from sudden breaks in the rocks.

"If the earth is thrust up at all, it is the earthquakes at the time must have been terrible. Even now there are certain mountains that, though millions of years old, are still geologically 'young' and are slowly rising. The mountains of Japan fall into this class and it is their 'growing pains, so to speak, that cause the almost daily earthquakes in the Japan sea archipelago. Now that the strains accumulate over a considerable period and the break or slide and collision which finally occurs is violent enough to shake down hills, open wide cracks and destroy cities."

TRANSFUSE OWN BLOOD TO 2

Eastern Physicians Save the Lives of Two Patients by Novel Operations.

Lives of two patients who would otherwise have succumbed from internal hemorrhages were saved by draining off their own blood and reinjecting it in a rare operation, made at the New Haven hospital, according to a dispatch to the New York World.

One of the remarkable transfusion operations was performed on a woman by the staff of obstetrics. The other was by the surgical staff, upon a man apparently mortally injured in an automobile accident.

The woman, according to the announcement, suffered from a severe abdominal hemorrhage from which patients rarely recover. Quick work was required by the obstetrical staff. The hospital blood expert was summoned the blood drawn from the abdominal cavity, the wounded vessels closed and the blood almost immediately filtered and re-injected into the dying woman's veins. The effect was almost instantaneous.

An hour afterward the male victim of the automobile accident was brought to the hospital in an ambulance with a punctured liver, resulting in abdominal hemorrhage. An operation was decided upon. The wound in the liver was mended by the use of rubber, a familiar operation.

The blood was then drawn from the abdominal cavity and re-injected to the man's veins after filtration. In both cases, the citrate method was used that is, citrate was added to the blood to prevent coagulation.

DISEASE TERRORS PASSING

Theory Advanced That Germ Species May Die Out as Old Mammals and Dinosaurs.

Is it not likely, speaking as a layman and without medical erudition, that germ species originate, grow to maturity, then pass on to senility and die out, like so many families of creatures have done on this earth? The fact that dinosaurs of certain species may now be moving on to oblivion did not the mammals and the dinosaurs rise, flourish and disappear? Then why not the microscopic germs that menace mankind?

Yellow fever is passing beyond the horizon. It is waving its last sad farewell to us. Soon it will be history only, its battles with humanity, its mass sacros, as remote as those of Scythians or the Babylonian kings. Finding no place to lay its fatal finger, it will give up the ghost.

Typhoid, dislodged from its last country well and village drains, has become a fugitive, pursued by health boards who bombard it with serum and gericides. It is in full flight. It cannot pause anywhere to organize the smallest epidemic. The seed of it will perish from the earth.

Why Worry.

"Serenity of mind is the most valuable asset of the present age," declared Senator Lodge of Massachusetts recently. "It is the only way to keep young, the only way to preserve health and, while we laugh at the world Sarah we really should envy her."

Sarah had just resigned her position to get married and when her mistress learned that she was shortly to go to Canada and make her home there she asked:

"But Sarah, aren't you rather nervous about going into a strange country like that?"

"No, madam," answered the girl. "That's my husband's lookout. I belong to him, and if anything happens to me it'll be his loss, not mine."

One Pleasant, the Other Not.

"Look at that," said a man in a crowd.

"I get you. You hold small hands in both cases."

CHARLEY GOSS IN SHERIFF FIGHT TO THE FINISH

Refuses to be Bull-dozed by Uniontown Political Rings Which Offer Him Proposition to Withdraw From Race

Last Thursday night men representing the two powerful political rings in Uniontown approached Charley Goss and made him a definite offer of $5,000 in an effort to get him to withdraw from the race as a candidate for the Republican nomination for sheriff. When this offer was refused by Mr. Goss, those gentlemen amended it and stated that they were willing to agree to any proposition Goss might make. This offer was also refused. Charley Goss is not for sale—he is not a quitter—regardless of any proposition that might be offered before the primaries, he will stay in the fight to the finish.

The Fight Is On!

The political gangs of Uniontown have received their ultimatum, and they will go the limit in an effort to defeat Charley Goss at the polls Tuesday. They are unable to say anything that would be detrimental to the character of Charley Goss but they will no doubt resort to the old political trick of circulating "eleventh hour" rumors to the effect that he has withdrawn. In an effort to swing votes to their candidates at the last minute. These political rings with their big slush funds contributed by the corporate interests of Fayette County will also spend money like water in an effort to buy votes for their candidates.

Be A Man—Don't Sell Your Vote!
Don't Sell Yourself Into Slavery
For A Few Dirty Dollars!

Charley Goss appeals to you as a good citizen of Fayette County to go to the polls next Tuesday and vote for him, and to do everything in your power to help him in this fight against the corrupt political bosses of the county.

Charley Goss is a man who has proved during the twenty-three years residence in Fayette County that he is a man of clean, honorable character, and unquestioned reputation. He is a man who has refused to sell out to any political ring or private interest, he is a man who if elected will be free from all political obligations and can carry out the laws as they stand on the statute books fairly and impartially, without fear or favor. Charley Goss is a man who by hard work, and sheer ability has proved that he can make good, he is a man who if elected will give this important office his whole-hearted time and attention. He is a man who has spent the best years of his life here a man who loves Fayette County, and will go the limit to make it a better and a finer place in which to live and bring up your children.

You have an obligation as a good citizen to give him your vote and you owe it to yourself, to your family, and to the county to use whatever influence you may have to combat the political tricksters who are endeavoring to nominate one of the several candidates they have placed in the field to protect their own interests.

The Question by Grace E. Hall

A woman walked alone one night
Within the silent park,
The moon thrust gleaming blades of light
Across the pathway dark;
Each wild thing in its sheltered home
Was motionless and still,
A pine tree in the skyline zone
Was the guardman of the hill.

Copyright by David B. Quinn

The woman walked with measured tread,
Unmindful of the way,
A weight of sorrow bowed her head,
And every path seemed gray;
The stars were like a million beads
Upon a velvet gown,
But when the heart in silence bleeds,
The eyes of man look down.

She viewed in retrospect the years
That, like the falling leaves,
Had flittered by, damp with her tears,
A harvest stripped of sheaves;
"What have I gained from life?" she cried,
With scornful glance towards heaven,
When lo! she seemed to see inscribed
The words, "What have you given?"

Radio Wave Fourteen Miles Long.

Long wave lengths are used to cover great distances such as transatlantic communication. It is such a long wave length that it is on long wave lengths that the short ones. The big station near Bordeaux, France, sets a wave of electric vibration that is 20,000 meters in length or approximately four miles long. It is so great that it is heard on Long Island and in a distance of 4,000 miles across the Atlantic, the wave length is still over twelve miles long. Station N.S. 1, Annabopolis, broadcasting time signals from 2 35 to 4 a. m. daily, has a wave length equivalent to about ten and a half miles. Post Nauen Germany, radiates a wave approximately eight miles long.

Esquimaux Have Strongest Teeth.

Less than two Eskimos out of 100 have any signs of tooth decay. Chewing coarse frozen food keeps their glands active and their teeth safe. One of the domestic duties of the women is the chewing of thick walrus hide to make it pliable enough for the men to work it into shoe soles.

Today the soft-cooked foods of the civilized nations have allowed the glands to slumber. As a consequence 95 people out of 100 have decayed teeth.

Couldn't Wait Longer.

An old lady was on a visit to her married daughter. One day there was company, and little Theodore, the hope of the house was doing his best to amuse his mother's visitors. Presently he left the room to return soon afterward with a zinc bucket. This he placed right in front of his grandmother while the others sat wondering what was about to happen.

"Grandma," said little Theodore, "will you kick it?"

"Kick the child," said the surprised old lady. "Why do you wish me to do that darling?"

"Because," replied the young hopeful, "I heard pa say we should be awfully rich when we kicked the bucket!"

THREE MEN AND A MAID

by P.G. Wodehouse

Illustrations by Irwin Myers

Copyright, by George H. Doran, Co.

"In love?" Eustace Hignett sat up and humped his head sharply against the berth above him. "Has this been going on long?"

"Ever since the voyage started," said Eustace reproachfully. "I told you my troubles. Why did you not let me know that this awful thing had come upon you?"

"Well, as a matter of fact, old man, during those last few days I had a notion that your mind was, so to speak, occupied elsewhere."

"Who is she?"

"Oh, a girl I met on board."

"Don't do it!" said Eustace Hignett solemnly. "As a friend I entreat you not to do it! Take my advice, as a man who knows women, and don't do it!"

"Don't do what?"

"Propose to her. I can tell by the glances in your eye that you are intending to propose to this girl—probably this morning. Don't do it. Women are the devil, whether they marry you or not. Do you realize that women wear black evening dresses that have to be hooked up in a hurry when you are late for the theater and that, out of sheer wanton malignity, the hooks and eyes on those dresses are also made black? Do you realize that?"

"Oh, I've thought it all out."

"And take the matter of children. How would you like to become the father—and a mere glance around you will show you that the chances are enormously in favor of such a thing happening—of a boy with spectacles and protruding front teeth who asks questions all the time? Out of six small boys whom I saw when I came on board, four were spectacles and had teeth like rabbits. The other two were equally sporting in different styles. How would you like to become the father of . . . ?"

"There is no need to be indelicate," said Sam softly. "A man must take these chances."

"Give her the miss," pleaded Hignett. "Stay down here for the rest of the voyage. You can easily dodge her when you get to Southampton. And if she sends messages, say you're ill and can't be disturbed."

Sam gazed at him, revolted. More than ever he began to understand now that it was a girl with ideals had broken off her engagement with this man. He finished dressing, and, after a satisfying breakfast, went on deck.

It was, as he had said, a glorious morning. The sample which he had had through the porthole had not prepared him for the magic of it. The ship swam in a vast bowl of the purest blue on an azure carpet decked with silver. It was a morning which impelled a man to great deeds, a morning which shouted to him to chuck his chest out and be romantic. The sight of Billie Bennett, trim and gleaming in a pale green sweater and a white skirt had the effect of raising Hignett to alter the program which he had sketched out. Proposing to this girl was just a thing to be put off till after lunch. It was a thing to be done now and at once. The finest efforts of the finest cooks in the world could not put him in better form than he felt at present.

"Good morning, Miss Bennett."

"Good morning, Mr. Marlowe."

"Isn't it a perfect day?"

"Wonderful!"

"It makes all the difference on board ship if the weather is fine."

"Yes, doesn't it?"

"Small one walk around?" said Billie. Sam glanced about him. It was the time of day when the promenade deck was always full. Passengers in cocoons of rugs lay on chairs, waiting in a dull trance till the steward should arrive with the eleven o'clock soup. Others, more energetic, strolled up and down. From the point of view of a man who wished to reveal his most sacred feelings to a beautiful girl, the place was practically Fifth Avenue and Forty-second street.

"It's so crowded," he said. "Let's go onto the upper deck."

"All right. You can read to me. Go and fetch your Tennyson."

Sam felt that fortune was playing into his hands. His four-days' acquaintance with the hard had been sufficient to show him that the man was there forty ways when it came to writing about love. You could open his collected works almost anywhere and about your eyes and dab down your anger on some red-hot passage. A proposal of marriage is a thing which is rather difficult to bring neatly into the ordinary run of conversation. It wants leading up to. But if you once start reading poetry, especially Tennyson's, almost anything is apt to give you your cue. He bounded lightly-headed into the stateroom, winking Eustace Hignett from an uneasy doze.

"Now what?" said Eustace.

"Where's that copy of Tennyson you gave me? I left it—ah, here it is. Well, see you later!"

"Wait! What are you going to do?"

"Oh, that girl I told you about," said Sam, making for the door. "She wants me to read Tennyson to her on the upper deck."

"Tennyson?"

"Yes."

"On the upper deck?"

"That's the spot."

"This is the spot," said Eustace Hignett, turning his face to the wall.

Sam stood up the companionway as far as it went; then, going out on deck, climbed a flight of steps and found himself in the only part of the ship which was ever even comparatively private. The main herd of passengers preferred the promenade deck, two layers below.

He threaded his way through a maze of boats, ropes and curious-shaped steel structures which the architect of the ship seemed to have tacked on at the last moment in a spirit of sheer exuberance. Above him towered one of the funnels, before him a long, slender mast. He hurried on, and presently came upon Billie sitting on a garden seat, backed by the white roof of the stateroom; beside this was a small deck which seemed to have lost its way and strayed up here all by itself. It was the deck on which one could occasionally see the patients playing an odd game with long sticks and bits of wood—net shuffleboard but something even lower in the mental scale. This morning, however, the devotees of this pastime were apparently under proper restraint, for the deck was empty.

"This is jolly," he said, sitting down beside the girl and drawing a deep breath of satisfaction.

"Yes, I love this deck. It's so peaceful."

"It's the only part of the ship where you can be reasonably sure of not meeting stout men in flannels and nautical caps. An ocean voyage always makes me wish that I had a private yacht."

"It would be nice."

"A private yacht," repeated Sam, sliding a trifle closer. "We would sail about, visiting desert islands which lay like jewels in the heart of tropic seas."

"We?"

"Most certainly we. It wouldn't be any fun if you were not there."

"That's very complimentary."

"Well, it wouldn't. I'm not fond of girls as a rule . . ."

"Oh, aren't you?"

"No," said Sam decidedly. It was a point which he wished to make clear at the outset. "Not at all fond. My friends have often remarked upon it. A palatial once told me that I had one of those rare spiritual natures which cannot be satisfied with substitutes but must seek and seek till they find their soul-mate. When other men all round me were frittering away their emotions in idle flirtations which did not touch their deeper natures, I was . . . I was . . . well, I wasn't, if you see what I mean."

"Oh, you wasn't . . . weren't—"

"No. Some day I know I should meet the right girl I could possibly love, and then I would pour out upon her the stored-up devotion of a life-time.

"How jolly for her. Like having a circus all to oneself."

"How jolly for her. Like having a circus all to oneself."

"How jolly for her. Like having a circus all to oneself."

"Well, yes," said Sam after a momentary pause.

"When I was a child I always thought that that would be the most wonderful thing in the world."

"The most wonderful thing in the world is love, a pure and consuming love, a love which . . ."

"Oh, hello!" said a voice.

All through this scene, right from the very beginning of it, Sam had not been able to rid himself of a feeling that there was something missing. The time and the place and the girl—they were all present and correct; nevertheless there was something missing, some familiar object which seemed to leave a gap. He now perceived that what had caused the feeling was the complete absence of Bream Mortimer. He was absent no longer. He was standing in front of them with one leg advanced, his head lowered as if he were waiting for someone to scratch it. Sam's primary impulse was to offer him a nut.

WRIGHT-METZLER CO.

Fall Exposition Week's Feature Tomorrow-

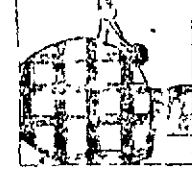

FALL SEWING DAY

First Steps -

When one first begins to plan a costume, the thought of patterns comes to mind. And patterns in the minds of many women means only one thing - Review. The reasons for this to find the perfect pattern for the new styles first of all cover every possible need of every wardrobe. They are easy to use and under hand and none costs more than the sold exclusively here.

Main Floor

You'll Need -

Autumn's come running smoothly means that every necessary item is ready on the shelves of the sewing cabinet on the first of September. Avoid the annoyance of being without matching silks, trimming buttons, linings and the smaller articles by visiting the Notion Section tomorrow. Fall stocks are complete.

Main Floor

"And Laces" -

SAY all the worthwhile fashion magazines are to be extensively used for trimming. If you have a heart for the love of making particularly clever work, you will be much interested in our showing of lace. The lace is for a lot of gold or silver and they help you achieve many attractive effects. Buy tomorrow at $1.50 the yam.

Main Floor

The Fate -

THE FATE of many a frock this Fall will hang on its trimming. For many for you that there is such a beautiful variety to choose from here! Beaded ornaments are all aglow with touches of brilliant color. One piece, then directly in front - or to the side. And never fails to add new charm to a costume's effect. They are $2.00 to $7.50.

Main Floor

CHIM-RING - an unusually beautiful silk with new ribbed chenille-like surface is one of the most delightful fabrics of the season. Grey, brown, black $7.50 yard.

Leraine - one of the newest of printed silks prints dainty figures on navy, brown and sand backgrounds $2.50 yard.

Blythe - what adorable blouses it will make! - bring all over patterns in typical Chinese design. Combinations of navy-gold, black-white, brown-gold $6.00.

Chiffon Broche - to say that it is ravishingly beautiful but hard to describe. A light base overlaid with a pattern that reminds one of delicate lace. The woman who chooses it for her gown! New Fall shades $12.50 yd.

Princi Mettasse - is delightfully broad and will very quickly help you to decide that you must have a new jacket! Black, grey, mohawk, brown $7.50.

Kashmere Roshanara - noted for its glowing beauty of its Asiatic colors and the glory of the patterns. Not at all too wonderful to attempt to describe $6.00.

Special!

Jap Pongee 98c

You will want it to make blouses, waists and pretty dresses for the children! It is 32 inches wide - good quality - and special tomorrow only! Silks - Main Floor

THE woman who has her clothes made or who is clever enough to design them herself will find tomorrow in Fall Exposition Week a particularly interesting day. An inspirational display of new fall fabrics, trimmings and notions has been arranged to help you select your materials, decide on your styles, choose your colors - that the first call of Fall may find you ready with a delightful array of costumes.

Rich Brocades Are Good This Fall

THEY will be even better this season for Fall. They are quiet and once you have them, you will never want to part with them. They have been the favorite of queens. Of Fall clothing, a fall waiver comes in a form that is easily put in that is a joy to see.

Innocent Canton Crepe, navy and grey - $5.50 yd. Printed Crepe satin - two different patterns in black and white - $4.00 yd.

Paris Declares For Vivid Prints

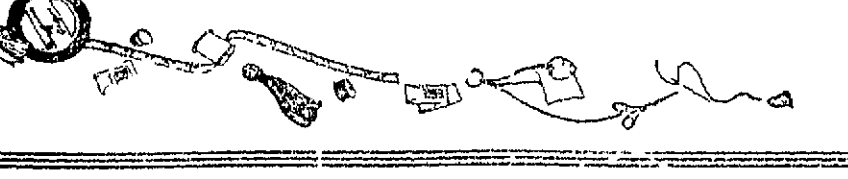

EVERY one has a wish to see a new kind of silk. They are to be employed in making blouses, jackets and mostly in combination with other silks - for dresses. They are no longer short of variety. They are no longer short of variety. They are no longer short of variety.

The silks used in the new designs are almost infinite in variety. Among the most favored are: Silk and wool crepe, Satin, Moroccan Canton Moroccan and Crepe de Chine. Priced $2.75 - 1.50 and $5 yd.

- and what of the new Fall woollens?

SPORT clothes - skirts, suits and coats. These are the first suggestion of the new Fall woollens so smartly plaided. Tweeds are waiting to be made up into the new double-breasted suits that are so new and refreshing - $2 and $2.50 the yard. Wool Sponges for clever skirts - $3.50 and $4.00. Broadcloths, French Serges and Point Twills will make becoming suits - and your ideal in dress if you've worn - ed yourself one of the new Coat Dresses.

WINTERS favorite coatings are the new plaided woollens in Fall Sewing Day's display. Make it an especial point to see them.
